

Abstract

The invention relates to a proton-conducting polymer membrane and to a method for the production thereof. Starting from a catalyst layer, which is 5 homogeneously deposited on the polymer membrane (3), the catalyst layer is subdivided into a number of catalyst segments (1a, 1b) by microstructuring so that adjacent fuel cell units of a planar fuel cell arrangement can be realized in the smallest possible space.